To better understand the firmware structure, the last 4 KB of the file were inspected in a hex editor.

The inspected range was:
0x311B1EB0 – 0x311B2EB0

Most of the data in this region appears as random binary bytes, which likely belong to compressed or encoded firmware data.

Closer to offset around 0x311B2700, some readable strings appear, including SELinux labels such as:
selinux#
system_u:object_r:etc_runtime_t:s0 system_u:object_r:root_t:s0

This suggests that the firmware contains a Linux-based filesystem with SELinux metadata.

The final part of the file contains many 00 bytes, which likely serve as padding to align the firmware image.
